Are We Working Toward Sharia?

25 September, 2003

Greetings, Gentle Reader,

Under Sharia, the official Islamic law, people are beheaded for converting to another religion.

A woman who becomes pregnant outside marriage is stoned to death for adultery, even if the pregnancy resulted from rape. So, what happens to the man involved?

To make a rape charge stick, five men must testify that they observed the attack. If there aren't five men willing to swear that they stood by and watched a forcible rape take place, the woman is stoned.

If a person steals, his hand is cut off. Since women are property under that law, rather than people, does a thief have to steal from a man to make it a crime? I don't know, but that's the law Afghanistan is voluntarily re-establishing.

We went into Afghanistan and caught as many vicious terrorists as possible. Since they didn't want us to catch their terrorists, we didn't get all of them. We thought we freed Afghans from the Taliban. Our mistake. They are sliding back into the Dark Ages under Sharia law enforced by the Taliban operating under a new name.

Is that what's in store for us at the hands of our renegade courts? It's been only a few years since school kids could be, and were, arrested and hauled off in handcuffs for praying around their flagpole. Why? Because a judge said religious expression on school grounds was illegal. We won that one and many others, but for how long?

Many schools forbid teachers to wear religious jewelry. Ten Commandments monuments are illegal. The Pledge of Allegiance is illegal. Officers' shoulder patches are illegal, if they refer to God. Crosses are illegal on public property, even crosses planted to honor our WW2 dead, and even if they are way out in the desert, where no one sees them. Why? Because they are against the form of Sharia law the ACLU and their henchmen have imposed on America.

No expression of faith escapes the all-seeing eye of the American Taliban. They have all the money they need, which gives them power, through the courts, to deprive Americans of their constitutionally protected right of free expression of religion.

For those who have forgotten, the words go like this: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." That's it. That's the entire First-Amendment reference to religion. There's nothing about separation of church and state.

The most important part for modern America is, "...or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Unfortunately, it's not the Congress doing the prohibiting; it's the courts, and they are doing it aggressively. Equally importantly, Congress, which has power to stop it, has stood by and watched the judicial emasculation of our Constitution by the American Taliban.

Since Congress hasn't slapped down the ACLU and the courts, they have victimized us, repeatedly. They have large numbers of suits going on, each designed to deprive Americans, individually and collectively, of their religious rights.

It doesn't harm them if a school permits the Pledge of Allegiance, but thinking like the Taliban, they force all Americans to submit to their religion, which is atheism.

If they want to be atheists, let them! Who cares? Real Americans have no interest in "prohibiting the free exercise..." of their religion. But neither do we want them violating our constitutional right to "the free exercise..." of our religion.

Are Americans in danger of being forced to live under Sharia law? Too late! We are living under the beginnings of the ACLU/courts' version of Sharia law, already. Hang around. It will get worse.

In the meantime: Keep your head down, and Welcome To Afghanistan!
