Traitors Deny America's Virtues

23 August, 2005

Greetings, Gentle Reader,

Dinesh D'Souza, author of "What's So Great About America" has helped me understand multiculturalism. Now, I understand why many young Americans see little virtue in this country, and why their reaction is so venom-filled when someone disputes their warped views.

D'Souza says multiculturalists "...present American history as an uninterrupted series of crimes visited on blacks, American Indians, Hispanics, women, and natives of the Third World." He quotes Cornel West of Harvard: American society is "chronically racist, sexist and homophobic." And Ali Mazrui: the U.S. is "a breeding ground for racism, exploitation and genocide."

These people discourage immigrant assimilation. Immigrants are to cultivate their separate identities and teach American youngsters "to accept and cherish these differences."

D'Souza says multiculturalists fill white Americans with a sense of guilt and blame, so they will accept responsibility for the sufferings of minorities in America and other nations' poor.

When immigrants come from other lands, many of which are filled with desperately poor, pathetically emaciated citizens, these crazies teach them to cling to and enshrine the very policies and philosophies that caused them to be starved and deprived in their homelands.

There is a faulty connection in these peoples' brains that keeps them from noticing that only in America are our poor people fat. This includes blacks, whites, and browns, no matter how uneducated. They have televisions, microwaves and computers, drive cars and live in warm houses with running water and indoor toilets.

When Mohammed Ali returned from a trip to Africa, a reporter asked him what he thought of that continent. His response should be required memorization by all school children, "Thank God my granddaddy got on that boat!"

There is no one in America who doesn't know his "granddaddy" was brought here as a slave, yet his response was, "Thank God!"

The newest con job is a demand for reparations for slavery, and many companies are knuckling under to this shakedown. Black on black and Arab on black slavery was, and still is, horrific in Africa, but you can bet the con men demanding reparations aren't stupid enough to try to extort money from those nations. Chances are, they'd be shot on the spot, and they know it.

So, what does Mr. D'Souza say is so great about America? He quotes one of his high school teachers: "If Hitler had been ruling India, Gandhi would have been a lamp shade." He meant the protestors who prostrated themselves on the train tracks knew the trains would stop, rather than run over them. He says Hitler, Genghis Khan or Attila the Hun would have run over them, but Brits wouldn't. Even the protestors relied on "Western principles and Western morality" in their fight.

As an immigrant, he points out an absence of a hereditary class system. A multi-millionaire CEO is likely to see his secretary eating lunch in the same restaurant as he. Only in America does a janitor not look upon himself as inferior, but rather an important link in the chain of commerce. His kids get an education and enjoy good healthcare, at others expense in extraordinary circumstances. Chances are he can go skiing or white water rafting on his vacation, if he so chooses.

Somerset Maugham wrote of abject hopelessness, doing no more than staying alive from day to day. This is antithetical to the American experience. Though multiculturalists maniacally deny it, anyone who wants to work hard in America has hope for the future, as 13 million illegal aliens have testified with their feet.

Tragically – and to our hurt – these ingrates, who refuse to emigrate from the country they so hate, have recruited America's text book writers and many teachers to indoctrinate America's young innocents' with their brand of treason.

We patriotic Americans have our work cut out for us.
